

BREAK POWER OF
PACKING TRUSTH. A. Jastro Says Abattoirs and Government Control
Will Smash Monopoly.

"The encouragement of the building of municipal abattoirs is best means of starting the wedge to break the power of the packing house combination in the United States," declared H. A. Jastro of Bakersfield, Cal., who is here to attend the cattlemen's convention.

"Various plans for improving marketing conditions in the United States will be proposed during the next two or three days," said Mr. Jastro. "The members of the association are not a unit on the methods that should be adopted to improve conditions and break the power of the packers. Personally, I believe that the construction of municipal abattoirs throughout the country would effect some improvement in conditions."

California Packers.

"One abattoir, furnishing a home market for the producer, would not, of course, cut much figure. But with such plants scattered throughout the country, enough business would be taken from the packers to at least make them feel that conditions are changing and it would be better for all interests to work in harmony. In California we have a number of small packing plants, and as yet we have had no trouble with the big packing interests. California is really the only state where the packing interests do not control the situation."

Government Control.

"Then I am strongly in favor of government control of the packing houses to this extent, that they force the segregation of the various features of the business now controlled by the packers. The stock yards, commission houses, terminal loan companies, taneries, glue factories and other closely associated industries, are controlled to a more or less degree by the big packing houses, and if these could be segregated conditions would be different."

Owens Site of Butte.

Mr. Jastro is interested in a number of large ranches and cattle companies in the southwest. Among others he owns the Victoria Land & Cattle company, whose holdings are in the Elephant Butte country. Some 35,000 acres of the company's holdings will be submerged when the Elephant Butte reservoir is filled.

NO FORDSCITIZEN ABATTOIRS
PLAN OF DAVISCommissioner of Agriculture
Has Plan to Remedy
Market Troubles.

Fred W. Davis, commissioner of agriculture for Texas, will advocate the establishment of municipal and cooperative abattoirs before the American National Live Stock association convention as a means for cutting out the profits of middlemen and to strengthen the tone of the market in large cattle deals. He will cite the success of the municipal abattoir in Paris, Texas; the tremendous savings to the people of Denmark, where 10 abattoirs virtually control the meat supply of that kingdom; and the lesson of New Zealand, where municipal abattoirs remain though many Utopian ideas of cooperation have failed.

Ready for Rough and Tumble.

Mr. Davis arrived in El Paso Sunday evening and is registered at Hotel Sheldon. "I come as a visitor and will take my chances in rough and tumble on the convention floor to present my ideas. Three things bring me to the convention. My duties as a commissioner as outlined under the law require that officer, are to do everything possible to bring about a higher breeding of stock. I am chairman of the board of supervisors in the matter of enforcing and establishing the warehouse law. I have to do with all range products as well as farm products. The swine breeders, at a recent convention in San Antonio, appointed a committee to meet with the cattle raisers, looking to the establishment of more stable markets, and the committee as appointed has designated me as chairman."

Higher Breeding Wanted.

"Now the matter of higher breeding is something the cattlemen are already deeply interested in and there is little need to stimulate that development. The main question we have to face is that of better markets and that is the question to which I am committed."

"I would secure better markets through the establishment of the municipal abattoirs. By this I mean local plants for each community where the cattle that are slaughtered and consumed in that community may be prepared with the cattlemen first buying up the cattle, second, paying the freight to Fort Worth, Kansas City or Chicago, paying a commission to have the cattle sold; and later to buy the meat after it has been slaughtered many hundreds of miles from home and brought back for local consumption."

Abattoirs Would Help.

"Local abattoirs would prevent such a condition and eliminate the middleman's profits. The abattoir at Paris, Texas, for instance, charges 15 cents for hogs killed and 10 cents for sheep. It has the privilege of having the meat stored in refrigerating apparatus for three days without cost; and after the third day a nominal charge is made. It may be that every community could not slaughter and care for meat on the same basis, but that is for each community to work out. Certainly it would be a much cheaper way than the long process through which we now go."

How They Would Help.

"And how then would the local abattoirs help the larger stockmen with their thousands of head of stock? It would help them in this way. The smaller communities would be able to take care of their local production and consumption at a minimum figure and the freeing of the market of these thousands of small deals, would strengthen the market and make the packing house offer better prices for the larger shipments of cattle which they would need."

Swine Breeders Favor Plan.

"The swine breeders are committed to the municipal or cooperative abattoir and I think that the cattlemen are sympathetic toward the idea. I don't know for a certainty—and that is why I am here. I want to find out."

"Right now the market fluctuations are so rapid that no one in the cattlemen's game knows what to do. One day cattle go up and feed stuff goes down; the next day it is the reverse. By developing the cooperative plants a certain stability is bound to creep in to the market and the dangerous and speculative elements will be eliminated."

Republican Leaders Meet; Are Favoring Harmony.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 24.—Republican leaders, members of the national subcommittee on convention arrangements, met here today and discussed plans for the party convention set for June 7 in the Chicago coliseum. Though empowered by the national committee to select a temporary chairman for the big Republican gathering, the committee members here declared no steps in that direction would be taken at this meeting.

None of the committeemen would say whether or not the harmony plans would extend to the nomination of Col. Roosevelt as the Republican standard bearer.

Franklin Murphy of New Jersey said there was a great disposition to bring about harmony if the Progressives are not nasty.

"It is a Republican year and any strong man nominated can defeat Wilson," he said. "No party can tell who the candidate will be."

Chairman Charles D. Hilles said: "The convention will be open minded. The candidate will be named in the convention."

Representations are about to be made by Gen. This is according to the Mexican consulate here.

Mal J. L. The mounted civilian, who is alleged to have been shot, is a boy less than 15 years of age, in charge of the horse. He was shot by Gavira, according to the Mexican consulate here Monday.

MARGUERITE SNOW, the charming Metro star, who is starred in "Rosemary," is in constant demand among the artists of New York city because of her singular beauty.

If she consented to pose for every prominent artist that besieges her, Miss Snow would not find time for the motion pictures at all, and would only be seen in oils and pastels. However, before leaving for Savannah to play the "lead" in "The Upstart," Miss Snow sat for a miniature for an artist in Carnegie hall, which will be sold at auction for the benefit of the general Red Cross fund.

"SOULS IN BONDAGE"

Nance O'Neil has completed her work on the multiple reel feature, "Souls in Bondage," and is enthusiastic in her praise of the same. "Souls in Bondage" is an original story written for the screen by Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "The Gods of Fate."

"Souls in Bondage" was chosen by Miss O'Neil as the story best suited to exploit her talent. It is a "sex drama" in five acts and runs the gamut of emotion. On the release of the first day of this month it is predicted Nance O'Neil will add fresh laurels to those already won.

SOMBER ON SCREEN:

GAY IN PRIVATE LIFE.

Contrary to the very natural supposition, Pauline Frederick is the most blithe and happy of individuals in private life.

To see her on the screen in "Zaza" or "Bella Donna," or any other of the Fox Players' productions, is to picture a very somber, deeply intellectual person who preferred Russian novels and heavily draped rooms to candy, novels and the open air.

But Miss Frederick is nothing if not full of fun and radiant with the joy of living.

Early in 1916 Ruth Roland and Henry King are going to be seen again on the screen in "Zaza" features as costars. Both appeared prominently before the public last year. They were one of the most popular film couples. A number of scenarios by well known screen writers are being prepared especially for Miss Roland and Mr. King.

"THE BECKONING FLAME"

To the land of Arabian Nights we are carried by the beautiful hunting scenes of "The Beckoning Flame," the latest Thomas Ince spectacular. Tri-angle production, which is the special attraction at the Grecian today and tomorrow. Henry Woodruff as the army officer, is supported by one of the most natural and unusual little artists in the acting profession, the little Japanese actress, Tsuru Aoki. One critic says: "It is dangerous to make comparison, but the work of this little artist in this beautiful picture, in point of style, bears a striking resemblance to Mary Pickford's. Both are appealing in their simplicity and emotion rather than resorting to exaggerated methods." "The Beckoning Flame" is a story of great emotional heights and depths. All the luxurious atmosphere of the orient is shown and there is a striking picture of the privacy of life among people of high rank in India, where the action of the drama takes place. This is a picture that is different, but the same Triangle standard of quality is maintained. This is a rare treat. Don't miss it.
